Keisha had a major breakthrough in her family tree research today! Her mom (Gladys) visited the family/namesake plantation this summer and told her about some of the history. Keisha followed up on her great, great Grandmother's (Lavenia b.1859) slave owner Caleb Savage's history, and discovered his will (below from 1862 - 155 years ago, three years before the Emancipation Proclamation!) where he gives away his land and his 'negro' slaves by name, including Isaac, who was nicknamed 'Yellow Isaac" - you think he was a mulatto? - crazy! 680 acre farm in northern VA! The also reference 'negro slaves', did they have white or Indian slaves too?

She also found several handwritten docs that detail the white Savages' being pissed off because the Suffolk VA Unions soldiers raided the farm during the Civil War, took food, horses, and all of the slaves ran away (they weren't freed, the just broke the hell out during all of the chaos - LOL! Other documents give her great-great grandmother's mother's name - so she can now go back another generation!

Wow!!!

This is the breakthrough that most Black Genealogists wait and hope for. It's so chilling when you read these documents, knowing that they were talking about our forebearers. Enjoy sifting through these documents, and consider down the road publishing something of your journey to get to this point.

Love,

Dad
